

IE Discovery Names Chris Knox Chief Information Officer

AUSTIN, TX (January 24, 2008) - IE Discovery, a leading provider of comprehensive Discovery Management solutions for the legal community, has named Chris Knox its Chief Information Officer. In his newly created position, Mr. Knox will be responsible for the implementation of strategic initiatives and IT expenditures, as well as the development of company-wide operating procedures. Additional responsibilities include the oversight of enterprise architecture and process design development and implementation. Mr. Knox has been with the company for 7 years, serving most recently as Director of Commercial Programs.

“Chris’ leadership abilities are outstanding, particularly while managing services for our corporate clients,” said Chris May, CEO at IE Discovery. “His experience at IE Discovery and his expertise in leveraging technology will be invaluable as he works with us to implement standardized, innovative approaches to industry issues. Chris brings proven success in finding and pursuing new opportunities for growth – which have resulted in lower costs and more effective solutions for our clients. We are pleased to have Mr. Knox as part of our senior management team.”

With a B.S. in Engineering from the University of Texas and a MBA from Syracuse University, Mr. Knox has more than 12 years of project and resource management experience at technology-related companies. Prior to IE Discovery, he designed and implemented data collection networks for software developers and Fortune 500 corporations. Mr. Knox also previously created Geographic Information Systems for large municipalities, specializing in the development of algorithms for hydraulic models.
